This anthology is a collection of articles from many different authors who present all sides of the abortion topics. There are articles that discuss the legalities of abortion in relation to the Constitution, religious views on the topic, and moral philosophies on the process of aborting a fetus. The anthology provides arguments from men and women on the issue from various backgrounds and political perspectives, providing an equal balance of opinions.

This article is concerned with the bill passed on banning partial birth abortions. It explains that the terminology is irrelevant when describing which procedures are legal or not. The author writes from a pro-choice perspective and comments that the media has played a role in promoting the abortion debate. This source would be appropriate to use if the research paper was based on proving why the partial birth abortion procedure is not a legitimate bill to be banned because the bill is not supported by the AMA.

The article presents the Partial Birth Abortion Ban Act from the Republican’s view supporting the bill. It explains that this political party holds views which do not support abortion unless the mother’s safety is in danger. The article goes in depth explaining how the legislation is against partial birth abortions because it is an inhumane and barbaric procedure. This source is biased against abortion, giving statistics and examples that the majority of the U.S. population is pro-life. It would be important to include these arguments in order to give fair representation of both sides to the abortion debate.
